FOREWORD

Pursuant to Section 92 (2) of the County Government Act No.17 of 2012, the County Governor is required to submit an annual report to the county assembly on citizen participation in the affairs of the county government. Public participation is an integral part of county governance as provided for in the Constitution of Kenya,2010, the Public Finance Management Act,2012, County Government Act,2012, Urban Areas and Cities Act,2012 and other Country and County legislations.

The commitment on entrenching public participation in county development and governance is emphasized in my manifesto as a foundational development pillar dubbed “our people, our priority”. My administration is committed to ensure citizen participation is not for compliance with the provisions of the law but rather meaningful and effective.

This report reviews the levels of citizen engagement in county governance and decision making processes. It highlights challenges, lessons learnt, recommendations and proposes key areas of improvement towards enhancing participatory development processes in the County.

1.3 Legal basis for County Annual Public Participation Report FY 2022/24

The County Annual Public Participation is prepared and submitted pursuant to Section 92 (2) of the County Government Act No. 17 of 2012. The law requires the County Governor to submit to the County Assembly a report on citizen participation in affairs of the County. This legal requirement ensures that the County Government engages the citizens on the governance and decision making processes pursuant to provisions of the Constitution 2010, The Public Finance Management Act,2012, County Government Act,2012, Urban Areas and Cities,2011 among others.

1.4 Objectives of the County Annual Public Participation Report

The County Annual Public Participation Report is prepared with the following objectives;

- To establish the levels of citizen participation in county governance and decision making processes in the FY 2022/23 including special interest, minority and marginalized groups/persons.
- To review performance of planned public participation programmes and activities
- To assess the level of incorporation of community/stakeholders proposals priorities into county plans, budgets and legal documents.
- To document the challenges, lessons learnt, recommendations and areas of improvement for FY 2023/24.

1.5 Principles of Public Participation

When conducting/facilitating public participation and civic education activities, the following are principles which are adhered to;

- Build a realistic timeframe for the consultation, allowing a reasonable period for each stage of the process.
- Be clear as to the type of the public, community or profession to be consulted, the issues or matters for consultation in for what specific purpose.

- Ensure that the consultation document is as simple and concise as possible, providing the summary of the issues or matters for consultation and clearly setting out the questions to be addressed.
- Publish and distribute the documents as widely as possible, including but not limited to providing hard copies, television advertisement, websites, community radio announcements and traditional media.
- Ensure that all responses are carefully and open-mindedly analyzed and the results. Made widely available to that public, including an account of the views expressed and the reasons for the decisions taken.
- Disclose all information relevant for the public to understand and evaluate the decision.
- Ensure that stakeholders have fair and equal access to the public participation process and their opportunity to influence decisions.
- Ensure that all commitments made to the public, including those by the decision-maker, are made in good faith.
- Undertake and encourage actions that build trust and credibility for the process among all the participants.
- Be personally responsible for the validity of all data collected, analyses performed, or plans developed by it or under its direction.
- Ensure that there is no misrepresentation of work performed or that was performed under the relevant body's direction.
- Examine all of its relationships or actions, which could be legitimately interpreted as a conflict of interest by clients, officials, the public or peers.
- Not engage in conduct involving dishonesty, fraud, deceit, misrepresentation or discrimination.
- Not accept fees wholly or partially contingent on the client's desired result where that desired result conflicts with its professional judgment.

CHAPTER 4 –CHALLENGES, LESSONS LEARNT, RECOMMENDATIONS AND CONCLUSION

4.1 Introduction

This chapter outlines the challenges experienced, lessons learnt and recommendations for enhancement of citizen engagement in county governance and decision making processes in future.

4.2 Challenges

Citizen participation is a vital component of effective governance. However, they are not without challenges. Below are some of the challenges experienced during citizen engagement:

- Vandalism of county projects: This includes the deliberate destruction, damage, or theft of public infrastructure, facilities and assets intended for the benefit of the community. This leads to disruption of essential services provision to the community, such as water supply, sanitation, transportation, and education, affecting the daily lives of residents. Repairing vandalized projects takes time and resources away from other development initiatives, potentially delaying progress on other important projects.
- Inadequate conceptualization and scoping of projects. Most projects do not have end-to-end concepts and therefore scoping is done based on available funds. Without project concepts and feasibility studies it is impossible to determine the project components, the costing and the timelines for implementation.
- Natural calamities and disaster -the prolonged drought that faced the County leading to crop failure made the county to reallocate resources Kes. 300 Million allocated to community priority projects to fund relief food and seed distribution to farmers for the October, November, December (OND) 2022 rainfall season.
- Reallocation or alteration of Community priority projects without public participation. This has affected subsequent public participation attendance as communities are losing trust and confidence with participation forums and outcomes.
- High Poverty rates - The county is faced with a high poverty rate which leads to high dependence rate lowering the saving which reduces the rate of individual investments in the population. This has led to high unemployment rate among the youth and other vulnerable groups and high crime rates.
- Human resource gaps - The directorate incharge of Public Participation has had existing staffing gaps at county headquarter, sub county and ward levels. The gaps have affected facilitation and implementation of participatory development programmes and projects.
- High illiteracy levels - Majority of the people who attend public participation forums at cluster, sub ward or ward levels have low levels of education.
- Limited awareness and access to information - Citizens may not be aware of ongoing initiatives, public meetings, or how to get involved. Lack of information or clear communication channels can hinder engagement.

- Inadequate budgetary allocation - the directorate has for years been allocated funds for implementation of programs and facilitation of decentralized officers to undertake routine and targeted public participation and civic education programs.
- Low participation by youth and people with disability in the public participation forums.
- Slow legislation and enactment of public participation and civic education bill,2023 and other county laws, policies and bills.
- Inadequate and untimely community feedback and access to county budgets, project and plans information
- Low capacities of community need identification, project conceptualization and prioritization
- Lack of citizen participation and feedback in supplementary budget processes
- Low uptake of knowledge management and documentation/learning/sharing
- Un-harmonized public participation forums or county government events are resulting in community fatigue.

4.3 Lessons learnt

The County through the challenges and experiences encountered has learnt the following;

- Citizens have a civic duty to participate in county governance and the right to manage their own affairs and further their development. Embracing this has led to sustainable development and community driven development initiatives.
- Alteration or reallocation of community priority proposals and project funds respectively can affect public participation attendance and reduce communities' confidence on government and PP outcomes.
- Thematic participation forums have ensured development aspirations and priorities of the minority and marginalized being considered in the county budgets and plans. This has helped an all-inclusive County.
- Timely communication of participation forums and utilization of several mobilization strategies has worked well in mobilizing communities for the forums and other government events/functions.
- Delayed project implementations affect mobilizing, organizing and facilitating public participation forums.
- With access to timely access to information, citizens are able to make right decisions and can actively participate in County decision making processes
- Citizen participation in service delivery through establishment of project management committees can lead to increased project ownership and sustainable development. This has also enhanced transparency and accountability in service delivery and financial management.
- Civic Education and community capacity building is prerequisite for effective public participation.
- Miradi Kwa Jamii Programme implementation has helped the County address high unemployment challenges and involved communities in socio-economic transformation agenda. Projects can be manually implemented with less costs.

- Community public participation structures play a key in mobilization and sensitization of communities on County Government Agenda, programs and projects.
- The Involvement of stakeholders throughout the planning, monitoring, and evaluation phases of a project is crucial for its success. A sense of ownership and engagement in decision-making will be felt thus, it will foster a collaborative environment and increase the likelihood of project success.

4.4 Recommendations

To strengthen citizen participation in governance and decision making process, the department recommends as follows;

- Strengthening access to information on county budgets, legislations and project plans as espoused in Article 35 of the Constitution of Kenya and Part IX of the County Government Act,2012.
- There is a need for harmonization of public participation within the County to reduce community fatigue and to allow them to engage in socio-economic activities.
- The County Assembly should fastrack legislation on Makueni County Public Participation and Civic Education Bill,2023 and other county laws, policies and bills.
- Strengthen community feedback mechanisms by undertaking timely feedback and development review forums.
- The County Government should establish the 3rd cycle of development committees as it will create a structure for public participation and a community framework for the County.
- Allocation of adequate resources for public participation and civic education programs
- Strengthening of grievance redress mechanism
- The County Government should fill existing human resource gaps in the directorate incharge of public participation and maximize investing in human resource capacity development which is very essential for effective service delivery. Having the right skills in place ensures that tasks are performed efficiently and at a high quality
- Full end-to-end conceptualization of projects should be prepared in consultation with all stakeholders for all proposed county projects and should capture all the project components.
- The county to ensure timely implementation of county projects.

4.4 Conclusion

For effective and meaningful public participation to be realized the public inputs, views, comments and perspectives should be taken into account during decision making processes. The County Government should facilitate timely community feedback and development review forums to improve community confidence and trust on the participatory processes. The County must deliberately invest in civic education that empowers and enlightens to engage and be informed on participatory processes and government agenda and projects.

In summary, real public participation helps in recognizing the right of communities to manage their own affairs and to further their development. This culminates in shared prosperity and socio-economic transformation.
